Overwhelmed by ACA Reporting Requirements?

The Affordable Care Act (ACA) imposes demanding information reporting responsibilities on employers starting with the 2016 calendar year. The reporting stipulation states that an information return will be prepared for each applicable employee, and these returns must be filed with the IRS using a single transmittal form (Form 1095-C & 1094-C). The filing requirements are based on an employer's health plan and number of employees.
