

ACA ELEVATE by BASIC

Overwhelmed by ACA Reporting Requirements?

The Affordable Care Act (ACA) has imposed demanding information reporting responsibilities on employers since the 2015 calendar year. The reporting stipulation states that an information return will be prepared for each applicable employee, and these returns must be filed with the IRS using a single transmittal form (Form 1095-C & 1094-C). The filing requirements are based on an employer's health plan and number of employees.

Noncompliance is Expensive

- The IRS can assess a $270 penalty per return for late, incomplete, or incorrect forms. Also, if the IRS determines that the failure to file is the result of intentional disregard, the penalty is $540 per return without limitations.
- The IRS has started enforcing the ACA employer mandate penalties which could result in hundreds of thousands of dollars in penalties for the Employer Shared Responsibility Payments (ESRP).
