Need Help Meeting the ACA Reporting Requirements?

The Affordable Care Act (ACA) imposes demanding information reporting responsibilities on employers. The reporting stipulation states that an information return will be prepared for each applicable employee, and these returns must be filed with the IRS using a single transmittal form (Form 1095-C & 1094-C).

For large employers, collecting and coding the necessary data required for ACA reporting may be simple given your access to internal resources and systems. However, transferring that data onto the applicable 1094/1095 forms can be challenging. Let alone finding time to distribute those forms to all qualified individuals by the impending deadline. If you're lucky enough to make it this far, you still have form corrections to deal with, plus finding a way to connect to the AIR portal for eFiling. It can take months and months for an employer to implement procedures, complete transmission formats, business rules, and validation procedures in order to successfully transmit electronically through AIR.
